Remembering Mrs. Chase

Dear Editor:

Thank you very much for your article on "Mrs. Chase" [in the February/March 2008 edition of Imprint.] As a student who used one of these mannequins and a current nursing history buff, I was delighted to read about the history that I never knew. We learned much from "Mrs. Chase" who "...never spoke or an angry look wore" (Manfreda, 1933) and who prepared us for the real world of nursing at that time.

Nursing today is much more complex and therefore a more complex simulator is needed. Your article on the simulation lab with its "sim people" addresses the complexity that nurses must be prepared to address in the health care environment.

Whether it's Mrs. Chase or SimMan®, simulation has, and will continue to have, a place in nursing education and preparation.

Sincerely,

Barbara Chamberlain,
